LILACS have been exceedingly popular flowering shrubs in gardens for many years, and with the remarkable improvements that have been achieved during the past twenty-five years in superior varieties and crosses, their popularity is still increasing. This is self-evident in the enormous crowds of people that visit the lilac display every season at Highland Park, Rochester, New York, and the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Mass. Only those who have had the great pleasure of seeing these wonderful collections can form any idea of their great beauty both in color and form of flower.

It is an error to suppose that lilacs have no particular charm, or that they cannot be seen to the best advantage except when they are in full bloom. When the clusters are partly expanded and the beauty of the unopened buds is contrasted with the open flowers is the time when the lilac displays its greatest charms. This is more particularly true, perhaps, in regard to the dark flowering lilacs, such as Congo, Pasteur, Montgolfier and Negro, which are charmingly handsome when the flower panicles are partly expanded.

It might be said that there are four shades or tints, with their infinite variations, in which the lilac reveals its greatest beauties, namely: White, creamy pink, lilac or bluish lavender, and purple red, and inside that general color scheme all the lilacs in cultivation range themselves, whether they are double or single.

Lilacs should be more largely planted in our gardens, as they are of easy culture and seem to thrive in a great variety of soil and climate, succeeding equally well in northern Michigan as in the more eastern states. A group planting of lilacs on the lawn is a beautiful sight when in bloom, but it is when grown as a single specimen that the real beauty of the lilac is seen to the best advantage. Lilacs should be planted during the months of April, May, September, October, and November.

Hybrid Lilacs

After many years of effort we are now able to offer this very extensive and choice collection of Lilacs, comprising the very best of the European introductions. Our plants have been splendidly grown, and are well furnished with flowering wood, which assures the purchaser quick and satisfactory results.

COMMON LILAC AND SPECIES

Syringa Vulgaris

The common purple Lilac of old-time gardens. It is a large, upright growing shrub with heart-shaped leaves and splendid clusters of pale blue and purple flowers of exquisite fragrance. Price, 4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Vulgaris Alba

In all respects the same as the foregoing except that it bears beautiful clusters of white flowers. Price,
4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Rothomagensis

(Rouen Lilac.) Has arching branches and large, loose, deep lilac flower plumes becoming lighter as they develop. Its narrow leaves differ from that of other Lilacs. A valuable variety for cutting. Price,
4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Rubra de Marley

Rich rosy purple flowers that are grown in great abundance. Resembles the common purple lilac and is very desirable. Price, 4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Persica

(Persian Lilac.) A fine old variety making a beautiful graceful plant. The very fragrant purple flowers are produced on loose panicles. One of the most desirable species. Price, 4 ft., $2.00 each.

LATE FLOWERING LILACS

These late flowering species add much to the beauty of the garden during the last weeks of June and early July. They are an interesting class of shrubs and should be more extensively planted.

Syringa Josikaea

(Hungarian Lilac.) This beautiful Hungarian Lilac grows into a tall narrow shrub ten to fifteen feet in height. Has dark green lustrous leaves and violet colored flowers. Price, 3-4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Villosa

(Himalayan Lilac.) A native of Northern China. Grows into a handsome round-topped bush ten to twelve feet high with wide broad clusters of flesh-colored or nearly white flowers. Price, 3-4 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Wilsonii

A tall, vigorous, fast growing shrub with erect stems. The long branched panicles of rose-colored flowers are very showy. Prices, 2½-3 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Wolfii

A new variety from Northern Korea having long, pointed dull green leaves and large clusters of violet-purple flowers. Price, 2½-3 ft., $2.00 each.

Syringa Reflexa

A recent introduction from Western China. A very distinctive variety when in flower, as the large clusters are gracefully arched and pendant on long stems. Color is a beautiful deep rose. Price, 2½-3 ft., $2.00 each.

TREE LILACSyringa Japonica

This native of Northern Japan grows into a small round topped tree fifteen to twenty feet in height with handsome dark green foliage. The creamy white flowers are produced in large panicles often eighteen inches in length. Syringa Japonica is the last of the Lilacs to bloom. Price, 4-5 ft., $2.00 each.

The beautiful illustration on the cover of this booklet is from a photograph of part of the wonderful collection of Lilacs in Highland Park, Rochester, New York. Much credit is due Mr. John Dunbar, Park Horticulturist, for the bringing together of this large and valuable collection of these plants, possibly without an equal anywhere in the world. Every year during the flowering season thousands of people come long distances to view the marvelous display of bloom.
